The First Step Toward Putting the Silver Act into Effect.

How the Offers of Bullion to the Government are to be Made.

Consideration of the Tariff Bill Resumed in the Senate.

McPherson Offering Amendments Only to be Voted Down.

How to Sell Silver.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The treasury department has taken the first step toward giving effect to the last silver act by the preparation of a circular which will be issued to-morrow, announcing that, on and after the 13th inst., offers for the sale of silver bullion, in lots of not less than ten thousand ounces, and delivered free of expense to the government at any specified coinage mint, will be received either by telegraph or letter for consideration at noon, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays each week, except on legal holidays All bids shall be addressed "Director of the Mint, Treasury Department, Washington" The offer must state quantity in fine ounces, the price per fine ounce, and the mint at which the bullion will be delivered. Owners will be notified by telegraph of the acceptance or rejection of the offers The right to reject any or all bids is reserved and also to accept any portion of the amount offered The delivery of the purchase must be completed within ten days after the acceptance of the offer When the bars bear the stamp of well known refineries, such approximate value will be paid, pending the melting and assaying of them, as may be regarded safe and proper. When the bullion is purchased, if of the character to require parting or refining, the mint charges for these operations shall be paid by the seller. No bars weighing over twelve hundred ounces will be received

Brilliant Marksmanship

DENVER, July 31. A Fort Wingate, N. M., special to the News says: The second day of cavalry competition of the division of the Pacific opened under the most favorable auspices. The weather was cloudy with not a breath of wind stirring. Some excellent scores were made in to day's shooting at the 200 yard range. Capt. J. B Kerr, Sixth cavalry, a distinguished marksman, and Corporal J. C. Thornton, Troop A, Sixth cavalry, made a score of 44 points out of a possible 50. Sergeant H Herser, Troop G, Second cavalry, came in second with a score of 43 points At 300 yards, Sergeant E H Sterner, Troop B, Second cavalry, made a score of 45, while Private L. M. Mitchell, Troop K, Sixth cavalry, and Sergeant Schone, Troop G, Fourth cavalry, both made scores of 44 points. A slight breeze sprung up at the 500 yard range, but that did not prevent Capt Kerr, Sixth cavalry, from leading with a score of 45 points, with Lieut. A Gray, Sixth cavalry, second, with a score of 44 points At the 600 yard range there was quite a wind blowing, but even under these unfavorable circumstances Private Mitchell, Troop K, Sixth cavalry, made the extraordinary score of 47 points out of a possible 50 Private Mitchell's score for the day was a total of 174 points, while Corporal J.C. Thornton was second with 171 points, falling short of Mitchell's only three points. The highest score for two days was made by Corporal Thornton who has thus far held the lead for the two days, and Private Keiser, Troop H, 6th cavalry, comes in a good second with a score of 325 point.

Noble Writes About Reservoirs

WASHINGTON, July 31. An answer to inquiries, in regard to the irrigation surveys, was sent to the senate to day by Secretary Noble He states that under the direction of the chief of the geological survey has been made and the boundaries marked of the sites for reservoirs by him selected under the act of [illegible]3 The reservoir site selections include only so much land as is, in each instance, intended to be used for the storage of water. It was not intended, the secretary says, that the surveys and selections under the act of 1888 should be carried to the extent of planning a system of canals, ditches and furrows for the distribution of water over the farms which it is deemed the people, when they come to cultivate these lands, can better do themselves The general purpose and plan of the department, the secretary says, is to preserve the sources of water supply from the possession or appropriation of individuals or corporations. It is believed, he says, to be the duty of his department, so long as this statute remains, to enforce that it may bear fruit at least in the preservation of the sources of water supply and reservoirs under either national or State government control

Affairs in Salvador's Rookery.

LA LIBERTAD, July 31.—It is reported that General Rivas, who was recently recalled from Honduras by the Salvador government, has raised troops around Cojutepeque and will join the main army operating against Guatemala, has turned traitor While he was supposed to be on his way to the frontier he turned back with a force of 3,000 Indians toward the capital, and stormed the barracks Fighting had been going on two days but no details were received as communication is interrupted.

Rivas started the revolution against the Menendez government some months ago and was defeated. He then fled to [illegible]

Republican Ticket Completed.

GRAND FORKS, N D., July 31 The republican state convention completed its ticket to-day as follows: Auditor, John P. Bray; treasurer, L. E Barker; secretary of state, John Flittle; attorney general, C. A. M. Spencer; commissioner of agriculture, H. I. Helmson; insurance commissioner, A. L. Carey.

The platform endorses the national administration and the silver bill, and congratulates Speaker Reed and other members of the house on the facilitation of public business It urges the passage of the federal election bill, demands high rate protection of the woolen industries, and favors all legislation tending to promote the agricultural interests. Blaine's reciprocity policy is endorsed and also the dependent pension bill. The platform favors an amendment to the state constitution forever prohibiting licensed lotteries Congress is urged to pass the law against using the mails for lottery purposes.

Fifty-First Congress

SENATE

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Frye stated that the river and harbor bill would be taken up next Friday The conference report on the District of Columbia bill was agreed to

Teller reported a bill authorizing the court of claims to take jurisdiction of the William McGarrahan claim to Rancho Penoche, California It was placed on calender

The tariff bill was then taken up and McPherson moved to make a rate on extract of licorice of four cents a pound, the amendment of the finance committee being to reduce the rate from six to five cents The usual political discussion followed, in the course of which, Aldrich said that the Mills bill originally proposed a duty of four cents on licorice paste, but when it was found that the men engaged in that business were democrats, the rate was increased to five cents. Vest denied this statement

The McPherson motion was finally rejected by the usual party vote and the committee amendment was agreed to

McPherson wanted the duty on castor oil reduced from 50 to 25 cents per gallon but Plumb asked that it be increased to 80 cents (the present duty) and this was agreed to.

The paragraph relating to opium was amended as recommended by the finance committee to make it read twelve instead of ten dollars per pound.

McPherson continued to offer amendments to several other paragraphs, but all were voted down

Some other committee amendments were agreed to, and four pages of the bill having been disposed of, the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Oates, of Alabama, rising to a question of privilege, offered a resolution for an investigation of the charges of corruption against members of the house, contained in the recent editorial in the National Economist.

After some discussion the speaker ruled that the resolution was not a privileged one. In doing so, he said, that the editorial was of the vaguest character It made no assertion except by inference. It made no statement upon which any body could be expected to base belief or conviction. It was within the knowledge of every member that paragraphs of this character were floating around in the newspapers of the country. The house could see the inconvenience which would result to the business of the house if every member had the right on the production of a paragraph like this to demand an investigation.

The house sustained the decision of the chair, an appeal having been taken by Oates, yeas 95, nays 71.

The house went into committee of the whole on the senate amendments to the sundry civil bill

The senate irrigation amendment was finally non concurred in. The committee then rose and the house adjourned without disposition of the bill.

THE HEARING CLOSED

Conclusion of Hearing in the Rock Island and D. & R. G. Case.

Easley Closes the Argument for the Denver and Rio Grande.

General Solicitor Withrow Discusses Rock Island Side.

Decision in the Case to be Rendered on Friday of Next Week.

The hearing in the United States district court of the motion for an injunction asked by the Rock Island to restrain the Rio Grande from interfering with its use of terminals at Denver, was continued yesterday morning in the music room of The Antlers It was nearly 10 o'clock when Justice Miller and Judge Hallett took their seats in the large bay window in the long room. Justice Brewer, of the United States supreme court, accompanied them and remained an interested spectator for some time. There were more spectators in the room than on Wednesday, many of the local attorneys dropping in to hear the arguments Among prominent D. & R. G. men present were General Manager S. T. Smith, Mr G. W. Kramer, manager of the Rio Grande express, Passenger Agent Hooper, Mr. W. A. Deuel, superintendent of the first division, Mr H D. Pike, secretary to the general manager, besides Colonel Easley and Mr. Valle of the general solicitor's office.

Upon the opening of court Colonel Easley continued his argument for the defendant He spoke at length, discussing the various sections and terms of the lengthy contract but was several times interrupted by Justice Miller with questions. They seemed to find some difficulty in understanding each other's questions and replies at times. Colonel Easley in his argument held that "full use" as used in the contract meant to use the road leased in its entirety and not just a portion thereof To a question by Judge Miller if the D. & R. G. could not sue and recover for use of its terminals without throwing the Rock Island out, he in substance replied that the question to be settled is whether the road has given up the Denver yards separate from the use of the main line If so this and other parts of the contract could be made oppressive to the D. & R. G. by the Rock Island by flooding its terminals with cars from the Fort Worth or other roads. It was not a question of turning them out hastily under a chained construction of the contract, but they claim a right under the contract which does not exist. If the court would require them to keep all of their traffic to the road leased, or keep such part of it away from any portion of the road as does not go over it, every interest would be subserved Their construction gives rise to every injustice and oppression. Judge Miller wanted to know if the Rock Island did not have business enough to Pueblo to justify it in running a train to that point if the Rio Grande would consider the contract had become void. He also asked why the whole contract should become void because the Rio Grande considers its compensation is not sufficient, and asked if that was not a matter subject to arbitration. Mr. Easley, in continuing his remarks, asked if the Rock Island had shown a clear title to the terminals at Denver which cost the Rio Grande about one third of $400,000 to maintain each year. He discussed what constitutes wheelage and spoke of the impossibility of estimating it for cars on the terminals. Near the close of Col. Easley's remarks, Judge Miller asked him what the Rio Grande would claim if it was shown that the Rock Island did have the right to use the terminals, and he replied, "nothing now," and said they were willing to stand or fall by the contract.

Mr. Thos. F. Withrow, general solicitor for the Rock Island, spoke for his company. He said that he would not attempt to follow all the arguments used by the attorneys for the defendant, because it would not be necessary, and because he did not understand them all. He thought the whole case turned on expressions in the contract in article 1, of section 1, and that their effect must be determined by the words and by the conditions at the time they were written The words "full, joint, equal," meant that the Rock Island was to have the use of the property the same as the Rio Grande, unless some other portion of the contract says otherwise After using such strong language they claim the right to use the terminals for handling business carried over other roads, but deny the Rock Island the same right. He said that the Rock Island could not make an improvement on the line of the road that the Rio Grande could not enjoy and the same was true on the other side. If these strong terms are limited by other clauses where are they? When the contract was signed the Rock Island company had not built a foot of its road in Colorado and the Rio Grande people knew that it had a right to build branches to any point and was not confined to building into Colorado Springs. He said that the Rock Island was paying about $100,000 a year interest on valuation, and that the Rio Grande wants the contract broken because they are losing a small amount on account of wheelage. They have given the Rock Island full and equal rights with them, and if they do not use half the road hereafter we now own company will still pay 3½ per cent on a valuation of about $19,118,[illegible] of the road. Mr. Withrow said that the Rock Island could not forfeit the contract that the Rio Grande could. If the Rock Island does not pay for six months then the Rio Grande can forfeit. The contract provides for settling all construction of its terms by arbitration, but the Rio Grande instead of asking for arbitration had said "get out."

At the conclusion of Mr. Withrow's argument Justice Miller said that he and Judge Hallett had not had time to consult regarding the case and that Judge Hallett had to go to Del Norte to hold court. They would therefore meet in this city next Friday and render their decision.

Mr. Valle stated that the Rio Grande would not interfere with the Rock Island trains pending the decision. Some discussion arose regarding the bond to be given by the Rock Island in case the injunction is granted but the judges hardly thought a bond necessary. At 11.30 a. m. adjournment was taken.

Manager of the GAZETTE.

Massachusetts this year passed an act providing for the discontinuance of grade railroad crossings. We have not the provisions of this law, but simply state this fact to show the tendency in ... communities. Under the act the Boston and Albany road has entered a petition in the supreme court to do away with twenty four of the grade crossings of their road, and supplant them with over or under crossings. It may be expensive to provide over or under crossings at all places in a new country, but certainly there ought not to be any grade crossings to a city or town of any size.

One of the most absurd contests is that now going on in New York regarding who should be called Mrs Astor. Mrs W. W. Astor is the wife of the male head of the family, but is the junior of Mrs. William Astor. The latter does not think that she should abdicate in favor of the younger. The postmaster at Newport has decided to send all letters addressed to Mrs Astor to Mrs. W W. Astor. The postmaster at New York has been wiser, however, and has decided to send back to the writer all letters addressed to Mrs. Astor, on the ground that they are not definitely directed; or if the outside of the envelope does not tell who the writer is, the letters will be sent to the dead letter office. This is according to American ideas. Our only titles are titles of respect and do not indicate any rank or class. Under these circumstances there is no reason why a lady called Mrs. Astor five years ago, should be called Mrs. Astor now.

WEATHER REPORTS.

We print elsewhere some correspondence between General Greely and Professor Loud, which we trust will be carefully read. There does not seem to be any really valid reason given for the change of the central station from this city to Denver or Ft. Collins, except that the state will pay for the publication of weather bulletins, out of the agricultural fund, if Ft. Collins is made the station, and the chamber of commerce will pay for the printing of the bulletins, if Denver is the station. But we think in either case the state will pay the bill. There would have been money available for the publication of the weather bulletins this year if the state had not exceeded the constitutional limit in the appropriation of funds. The matter will probably be adjusted next year so that there will be no trouble. The experience in Denver is that none of their commercial associations are any more inclined to pay such expense than our board of trade. The chamber of commerce will simply endeavor to have the state pass another appropriation next year.

The only other reason which General Greely offers for the change is that Denver is "more centrally located on lines of connection, which would enable the state service not only to collect but to distribute the information received from state observers." Denver has a larger population than Colorado Springs. But a central location does not depend upon a population because the information must be collected and distributed through the mails. For that purpose Colorado Springs is even more centrally located than Denver. In the weather bulletin for November, 1889, fourteen reports of the most importance came direct to Colorado Springs from the south and west, while only eleven reports came through Denver. A glance at the lines of mail connection in the state would show that this city is nearer the centre than Denver. The reason of this is obvious. The southwestern and middle western part of the state is fairly well settled and all connections must pass through Colorado Springs while the northwestern part of the state, which would have connection with Colorado Springs via Denver, is not settled up.

Besides Colorado Springs being more centrally located, there is one other consideration why it would be better to have the central station at this city. During the last twelve years Prof. F. H. Loud, with other professors, and with some of the students of Colorado college, has been making weather observations and preparing weather reports. He has never been remunerated for this work, as it has been with him a labor of love. It is needless to speak of the ability and accuracy with which he has done this work. Scientific men who have known of the work have invariably commended it. We doubt if a director of the bureau could be found who would bring to the work so much ability, so much devotion and service without pay. No adequate acknowledgment has ever been made of the unselfish service rendered by Professor Loud and others connected with Colorado college. To have an efficient head to this bureau is far more important than the position. A few hours difference in the receipt or transmission of mail would be comparatively unimportant as compared with having the statistics prepared and collated by scientists of reputation and experience. The statistics are of little value if they are collated by crude men who lack both devotion to the work and ability.

Professor Loud properly says that the city, by its indifference in this matter, has caused this agitation of the change. The directors of the board of trade ought to deem this subject of sufficient importance to take some action. It can probably do what the Denver board can do; that is, pay the expenses of a weather bulletin until the legislature meets and makes some appropriation.

How Waltham Does.

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 31, 1890.
To the Editor of the Gazette.

In an article on "Our City Accounts" in the editorial column of to day's issue of the GAZETTE, allusion is made to the report published last year by the city of Waltham, Mass. The writer of this communication went to Waltham in the winter of 1847 and there resided till coming to this city in December, 1886. During his residence there and afterwards, the town published annual reports—it had published them for many years previous. The town became a city in 1884, and the city has continued the publication of these annual reports. The writer has the reports for 1888 and 1889. They are entitled, "The Inaugural Address of ..., Mayor, with the Annual Reports of the several departments for the financial year of" the respective years. These reports are very complete. The city auditor therewith presents the annual report of the receipts and expenditures of the city of Waltham for the financial year ending — , with a detailed account of each department, a table showing the funded debt, the rates of interest and date of maturity of each loan; also a statement of the assets and liabilities of the city."

Like annual reports are made by very many towns in Massachusetts perhaps it is an almost universal custom, and such annual reports by the city of Colorado Springs would give the tax payers very clear information of where their dollars go.
R. S. WARREN.

The City Accounts

To the Editor of the Gazette:

The GAZETTE of yesterday very correctly stated that:

"The resolution proposed by Alderman Gillingham last Monday night was an eminently proper one, though it did not pass. It suggested a policy for the future regarding our city accounts which it would be well for the council to pursue."

This resolution provided that the city clerk should furnish to the tax payers of Colorado Springs a full and complete itemized report of all the collections and expenditures in every department of this city government. Now such a report the tax payers have a right to expect and if they are disappointed in their expectations they have a just right to demand it, and why the members of the council who were elected to look after the interests of the tax payers sat in their respective seats and defeated a motion so thoroughly in the interest of those who bear the expenses of the city government is hard to surmise.

The motion of Alderman Sprague providing that assistance be furnished the clerk, that an itemized report of the water works committee may be made by the city clerk is not sufficient. It does not cover ground enough. There are many other collections and expenditures made in other departments of the city government that the good people of Colorado Springs would like to see itemized. This motion should be reconsidered and defeated and Gillingham's motion adopted. This will be in the interest of the entire body of tax-payers and not in the interest of any individual. The GAZETTE was evidently right when it stated that every tax payer should have:

"A clear and satisfactory idea of the expenses of the city and of the cost of the operation of every department, and the cost of every public improvement. When it is known that such statements are to be made in full it may be a very important check on any council that may be disposed to do business loosely if not corruptly."

A year ago a resolution similar to that of Gillingham's passed the council, but for some cause or other, best known to the ex city clerk, he did not make a report in accordance with that resolution, and strange as it may seem, this same ex city clerk, now a member of the city council, opposed Gillingham's resolution. We might ask why this opposition? Are the books straight? If so, then it will be a feather in the ex clerk's hat should they fall into the hands of an expert. If not, then we may find some excuse for all this opposition.

A Union Convention

LANSING, Mich, July 31. The union labor, greenback and farmers' alliance convention was called to order this forenoon. The committees were appointed and the convention adjourned until afternoon.

In the afternoon a platform was adopted and the following ticket nominated: For governor, Eugene H. Belden; lieutenant governor, Jno. McGregor; secretary of state, Wm. Adams; state treasurer Henry Ellis; superintendent of public instruction, C. A. Zitter; justice, of the supreme court, Obrien J. Atkinson. The platform favors a service pension bill. The prohibition plank was rejected.

A Tale of Friendship

Billings and Hatworth were old bachelor friends. Reared together they had gone into business ... and each gained a considerable fortune. Now in their old days they made wills in each other's favor.

"If you survive me," said Billings, "I will rest happier in my grave knowing you were enjoying my hard earned dollars."

"Just the sentiment I was going to express," answered Hatworth enthusiastically; so they shook hands.

Whatever may have been the reason, in a week or two Hatworth mysteriously disappeared. What was particularly strange about it was he had left no word with Billings. The latter, naturally alarmed, started the police on a course of investigation. Their best efforts, however, failed to discover any tidings of the missing man.

"I think it might be advisable to advertise," said the chief detective when Billings called. "It can't do harm and might do good, particularly if you offered a reward."

"Certainly; that's just the thing. Draw up a poster offering $100 reward if my dear friend Hatworth is returned to me safe and sound."

"At the same time," suggested the chief, "you must consider the possibility that something has happened to him, and that he may be dead. Consequently, something bearing on that should also be put in the poster."

"Of course," was Billings' immediate reply. "Nothing is too much for me to do for my oldest, dearest friend. Write, '$100 if he is found alive, and $5,000 reward to the man that brings him back dead.'"—Philadelphia Times.

PADDLE WHEEL FISHING.

The Contrivance Used to Catch Salmon on the Columbia.

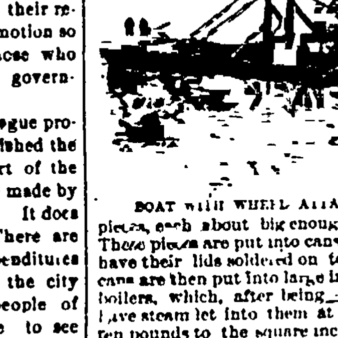

There are more ways of killing a cat than by choking it to death with melted butter, and there are many more ways of catching fish than by lines and hooks or nets. One of the most novel of these is by means of a paddle wheel, and it is largely employed by the salmon fishers of the Columbia river. The wheels thus used are very similar in appearance and construction to those of stern wheel river steamers, and they are the cheapest and most effective methods yet devised for catching their finny prey.

The wheel shown in the illustrations consists of nine arms attached to an iron shaft, and these arms are strongly netted in groups of threes at their outmost ends. The shaft is surrounded by a cone of wood, whose face or widest part is on the port side. The narrow part of the cone, or its apex, is at the end of a wooden trough. The wheel is pivoted on a gallows frame, and can be raised or lowered out of or into the water at will by means of blocks and tackle. The one here illustrated is attached to a scow, and of course is portable. Not all of them are so. Some of them are attached to piling built out into the river.

The paddlewheel method of fishing can only be employed in the rapids of the river, and it is about the only method used in the region of the Dalles, above Portland. When in use the wheel is submerged about one-third of its diameter, and is slowly revolved by the action of the water. The salmon seek the headwaters of the Columbia and its tributaries from the latter end of March until about the middle of June, in great numbers. They encounter the wheels in swimming up stream, and are by them lifted out of the water, thrown against these cones and thence slide into the troughs, down which they glide into the receptacles prepared for them. In the height of a good season a well located wheel will frequently catch from six to fifteen tons of salmon in twenty-four hours. It does seem rather a big thing to catch fish whose individual weight ranges from twenty to forty pounds by the ton, but that is the way it is done on the Columbia, and the salmon there caught are the best and finest flavored in the world.

Fully 10,000 men are employed in the salmon catching and canning trade on the Columbia river. Last year the pack amounted to over half a million cases, but this year, owing to an unfortunate difference of opinion between the packers and the fishermen as to the price of fish, a strike ensued and nearly half the season was lost. The catch and pack was consequently much lighter than usual, and the demand for salmon will have to be satisfied with fish caught and packed in Alaskan waters.

The method of "canning" salmon is simple, but interesting. When sold and taken to the cannery the fish are thoroughly washed and cleansed, and then cut into pieces, each about big enough for a can. These pieces are put into cans, which then have their lids soldered on to them. The cans are then put into large iron retorts or boilers, which, after being closed tight, have steam let into them at a pressure of ten pounds to the square inch. The cans are kept in the boilers until the fish in them is cooked. Then they are taken out, wiped clean and permitted to cool. Then they are labeled and packed in cases and are ready for shipment.

It often happens that a can is not sufficiently cooked. This is ascertained by the inspectors, who punch a small hole in each can to let the steam escape. All the cans are thus punched and the holes are soldered up again. Those which are insufficiently cooked are put back into the boilers again, and are again tested after their second withdrawal therefrom. So expert have the canners become that very few cans are spoiled in cooking, either by being over or under done.

Astoria, near the mouth of the Columbia river, is the chief salmon fishing city in the world. It has twenty-nine salmon canneries, employing over 5,000 men, and the value of their product is nearly $4,000,000 a year.

The salmon of the Pacific coast, unlike his brother of the Atlantic coast, cannot be caught by rod and line, as he most positively refuses to notice the most tempting lures that the most scientific disciples of Izaak Walton have designed for his palate. He is strictly business, and declines most peremptorily to become sport for any man.
J. B. MCCORMICK.

Caught by a Photograph.

Superintendent Theodore Voorhees, of the Central Hudson railroad, recently took up amateur photography as an amusement. The other day he turned the acquirement to practical account. While making a tour of inspection he asked a locomotive engineer whether he drank. The man admitted that formerly he had looked upon the wine when it was red, the whisky when it was beady and the beer when it was frothy, but he had forsworn such varieties and vexations and was now a teetotaler. "What have you to say to that?" queried the superintendent as he exhibited a "flashlight plate" to the astonished driver of the iron steed. The latter was struck dumb when he found that the superintendent had captured him not twenty minutes before anchored in front of a bar "unloading a schooner." His "resignation" was accepted.

Some Figures from Montreal.

The revenue figures from the Canadian port of Montreal are of interest just at the present time, when the tariff is a matter of general discussion. The customs receipts during June, 1890, were $715,396.12 as against $803,346.31 in June, 1889, a decrease of $88,950.14. The total receipts for the year ending June 30, 1890, were $8,... 8.5 52 as against $9,265,406.11 for the year ending June 30, 1889, a decrease of $188,... 630.59. The inland revenue receipts for June, 1890, were $238,891.02, and in June, 1889, $143,833.26, an increase of $95,058.66. The receipts for the year ending June 30, 1890, were $2,059,491.14, and for the year ending June 30, 1889, $1,888,330.90, an increase of $171,160.24, and an increase of $409,581.75 over the year 1888.

There are few every day interests which so directly concern the health of the family, especially at this season of the year, as the business of the milkman. To deprive us of the staple he serves would be that of a great loss to most of us, certainly to our children, for upon it their proper nourishment depends. When we consider the many complaints made by the press and people regarding impure milk, and the numerous devices resorted to by unscrupulous dealers to impose upon an unsuspecting public an impure article, it becomes a matter of importance to know with whom you are dealing. In this connection I would invite the closest inspection of every department of the management of our cattle—their food, the water they drink, the facilities the animals have for obtaining water at any time, and our system of handling the milk after obtaining it to the time of delivering it to the many families we supply.

Respectfully,

F. W. ISHAM, - - Manager.

Prof. Samuels!

Optician

And the Author of the Book,

"The Use and Abuse of the Eye,"

Has arrived in Colorado Springs and can be consulted at

Rooms 12 and 14,

Alamo Hotel!

Prof. Samuels

Offers to those who are suffering from weakness and defective eyesight his improved Crystal Spectacles, superior to any others in use, as the following evidence, taken from the Topeka Capital, of persons who have worn them for years will testify, and the rest will speak for itself.

The following are a few of his numerous unsolicited testimonials:

GOVERNOR'S TESTIMONIAL.

STATE OF KANSAS, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE, TOPEKA, May 17th, 1890.

To Whom it May Concern:

I have been compelled to use glasses for the past three or four years, especially at night. During all this time I have tried a good many different glasses, but have never found anything entirely satisfactory until recently.

The glasses furnished and fitted to my eyes by Prof. Samuels are the finest and only ones I have ever used which gave entire satisfaction. I therefore take pleasure in commending Prof. Samuels to all persons who may need his services, believing him to be possessed of extraordinary skill in the line of his profession. Very respectfully,
LYMAN U. HUMPHREY, Governor of Kansas.

PROF. H. G. LARIMER,

TOPEKA, Kan., April 17.

To whom this may come:

I cheerfully commend to your confidence and patronage Prof. H. Samuels, who corrected a very aggravated case of compound astigmatism in my eyes by fitting me with glasses. He thoroughly understands his business, and I have found him reliable in all that he undertakes. No one need feel any hesitation in trusting to his skill as an optician, as he is both a scientist and an artist in that line of work.

Very respectfully,
H. G. LARIMER, Principal Topeka High School.

CHANCELLOR SNOW.

LAWRENCE, Kan., August 10, 1883.

It gives me great pleasure to certify to the great benefits received by my son and daughter, aged respectively 12 and 10 years, by the use of Prof. H. Samuels' glasses. Both of them had suffered from defective sight, so that they had been compelled to abandon school for more than a year. Other eminent authorities had prescribed for them without success, but Prof. Samuels' spectacles gave them immediate and permanent relief. My son is now able to do entirely without glasses having been restored to their natural condition by the timely and skillful application of artificial aid.
F. H. SNOW, Chancellor University of Kansas.

ADJ.-GEN. J. N. ROBERTS.

LAWRENCE, Kans., July 2, 1884.

Professor Samuels:

DEAR SIR—The glasses you fitted to my eyes last fall did all you promised. My eyes recovered their strength rapidly, and I have had no occasion to use your glasses for the last six months. Respectfully,
J. N. ROBERTS.

AN OPEN LETTER.

From Lieut.-Gov. A. J. Felt.

TOPEKA, May 14, 1880.

Professor Samuels, Topeka:

DEAR SIR:—Please allow me to say a word for your eyeglasses. For many years the gradual loss of eyesight has caused me unspeakable trouble and annoyance. During that period it was my misfortune to purchase glasses of various dealers, always resulting in the conclusion that the attempt to improve my vision by wearing glasses was an absolute failure. A few weeks since a friend advised me to call on you for advice. The result was the purchase of glasses you recommended and it seems a duty due to others suffering from impaired vision to state that the result has been satisfactory in every particular and that their value to me cannot be measured in money. The work required of me since purchasing your glasses has been unusually trying, and it has surprised and gratified me beyond expression to learn that my vision has greatly improved and that my eyes seem stronger and my vision clearer than for many years before. Very respectfully,
A. J. FELT.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Owing to engagements Professor Samuels will remain here but a short time.

Professor Samuels does not attend to business outside of his rooms, and has no one connected with him.

If these are not chronically tottering we should consider ourselves of the elect. The analogy between human nature and nature as embodied in earth and sea and sky is decidedly comforting. It makes me feel that the atmosphere of the soul has as good a ... for its existence and its shifting properties as the atmosphere which surrounds us.

Among the new comers at Noyes Point this summer is Mr. Edward Bellamy, who, as I write, is sitting on the piazza of his pretty cottage, looking out upon the rainbow tinted waves that break with thundering noise against the rocks that cover this part of the beach. If I had not ... from various sources that the author of "Looking Backward" was summering at this point I should not have mentioned it, for in my opinion there is nothing that Mr Bellamy wants so much or stands so much in need of as being let alone. A hundred years' experience in looking backward is enough to tire any man, and friends, admirers, reporters and reformers will be doing a wise thing for humanity if they allow this distinguished writer to remain unmolested on the edge of the Atlantic.

A long acquaintance with the natives of the coast has made it possible for some of them to speak to me with the greatest freedom about things that bother them, and the other day I was much amused by having one of the most eccentric of the number invite me to step round the side of the house for a minute. "What is it?" I asked in some wonderment. "Why, say," said he, "they tell me that that air man that lives t'other side of you is a little off—kinder weak and gone up here, you know," tapping the crown of his old slouch hat as he spoke.

"Oh, yes, you mean Mr. Bellamy," I replied, not only willing but anxious to lead him on.

"Yes'em—Bellamy that's the feller. I was told," lowering his voice to an ...

"I didn't know that he pretended to be a kid," I answered.

"Wall, now, it can't be that you ain't heerd," my companion ... with a look of wonder on his weatherbeaten face. "Why, they say that one o' them old witch doctors cast a sort o' spell over him and that he went to sleep in a hole underground and woke up in Boston a hundred years arterward. Guy! it makes me feel creepy every time I look at him."

"He isn't too old to pick the bones out of fish?" I remarked interrogatively.

"Why, no, he's all right on fish, and nobody'd ever guess he was more'n thirty five or forty, but when you add a hundred onto them figgers you've got something that you don't often see in the way of a age."

It was not, humanly speaking, an easy job to explain the plot of "Looking Backward" to this rustic, and it was an utter impossibility to make him regard the author from my point of view. On the whole I feel convinced that I only succeeded in changing Mr. Bellamy from an exaggerated Rip Van Winkle into a lunatic. The remark that closed the conversation certainly points in that direction.

"Wall, by Guy! The cyclones and the earthquakes seems to be moving eastward, but I did hope they'd keep them air western anarchies where they belong. I don't give half o' my boat nor half o' my jackknife to nobody. I want you to understand that just now and then."

I couldn't help wondering as I listened ... break against a rock a few moments later and stared out upon the ..., if there was any reform possible except that which may be termed an alphabetical evolution and a heart to heart contact with humanity. I don't believe there is. Both head and heart must be educated to receptivity, and taken as a whole these are pretty tough organs. But what's the use of bothering with such questions on a hot day?

RIDER HAGGARD AND ANDREW LANG.

Their Joint Story an Attempt to Revive the Popularity of the First Named.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, July 28.—It is understood in literary circles that the latest romance of Rider Haggard is a desperate attempt on his part to gain his lost popularity. The subject ought to afford a person of great powers of imagination a superb opportunity, for it is understood that he will tell the story of Ulysses and Helen of Troy, or in short will try his hand at a tale which Homer has made immortal. In making this tale immortal Homer made him ... of eternal fame, so that Mr. Gladstone and the late Lord Derby were of the same opinion, which was that Homer, the narrator, was a greater man than any of the heroes whose story he told.

Mr. Haggard is to have the assistance of Mr. Andrew Lang, and in the first installment of the story, which is called "The World's Desire," the hand of Mr. Lang is decidedly prominent. He has written two poems which appear in this installment, and one of them is as good as anything he ever did. Some years ago we had a case of joint authorship which became quite famous. This was in the series of Saxe-Holme stories which appeared in one of the magazines. One of the authors furnished delicious poetry, while the other wrote the prose tale. The authorship has always been regarded as more or less of a mystery, although it is generally conceded that Mrs. Helen Hunt Jackson was the poet of the combination. If the Haggard-Lang combination succeeds as well as the Saxe-Holme collaboration did, Mr. Haggard will indeed have recovered his prestige.

In the opening installment of this new story it does not appear that Haggard has done any better than he did with "Cleopatra." That was a story which was much heralded and was pretty widely circulated, because it appeared in serial form in many newspapers in this country and in Great Britain. Some of the critics professed to find in "Cleopatra" evidence that Haggard had recovered his grip, but for the reading public which had been fascinated by Haggard's earlier tales the story contained little charm. One of the newspapers of this country which published it was satisfied that it had fallen flat with its readers, and there was no manifestation in its counting room that the story had excited a ripple of interest.

Haggard's loss of popularity was sudden. It was due to two causes. One was a woful falling off in inventive power, and the other was the accusation and proof that Mr. Haggard was a deliberate plagiarist. The Fortnightly Review, in an elaborate article, exposed a large number of his plagiarisms, and for a while his only friend and supporter among the literary men of Great Britain was Andrew Lang. Mr. Lang had some personal pride in Haggard's career, for he claimed to have been the first to discover Haggard's talent. There is no doubt that interest has been stimulated somewhat by the connection of Mr. Lang with Mr. Haggard in collaboration. Lang is one of the most brilliant men of the lighter sort in English literature, a delightful essayist and poet, but has never revealed any capacity for romance or narrative writing.

Publishers in this country have been fighting shy for a year or so of Mr. Haggard's books. Some of his latest novels did not sell sufficiently here to pay the cost of publication, and the large publishers had come to consider him as a ... in the pen, whose day is over and whose books would not ... There is ... have been a somewhat similar feeling among the English reading public, and it became necessary for Haggard to do something to restore to his books their selling capacity. The audacity of attempting to rival Homer, so to speak, will of course give some advertisement to the new novel, but literary men regard it as a most perilous undertaking. If the work is a failure it probably means the end of Haggard as a popular romanticist, but if it should happen to be a success it means a brilliant future for the unique creator of "King Solomon's Mines."

Two Managing Editors.

NEW YORK, July 28. One of the men most respected on Newspaper row is Mr Dana's first lieutenant in The Sun office, Chester S. Lord. Mr. Lord is a man of big stature and bigger brain, who goes about so unobtrusively that those who didn't know him would hardly notice him. He is noticed in The Sun office, though, and wherever newspaper men get together, and is rated as one of the brightest men in the business. The paper which he turns out speaks for him, and speaks louder to a newspaper man than can any mere eulogy. Mr. Lord is a remarkably good looking man. He is pretty close on to 6 feet in height and is proportionately stout. His features are clean cut and his mustache and hair are brown in color.

Another brainy young editor on "the Row" is Foster Coates, the managing editor of Col. Shepard's Mail and Express. Mr. Coates is the youngest man in charge of any of the big New York papers, and has still to pass the thirty year line. He has held his present responsible position for several years, has made a very enviable and very wide reputation and is one of the men who are going to be heard from in the near future. A decade or so ago Mr. Coates was working at the printer's case, and owes his advancement through the editorial room to the managing editor's chair of the biggest afternoon paper in New York solely to his own push and ability. Mr. Coates is acknowledged to be good looking. His figure is compact and well built and rises to a height of about 5 feet 7 inches. His hair, eyes and mustache are as black as black can be.

Information About Fish.

Trout spawn during the months of November, December and January. At that time they leave the deeper waters of lake or stream and seek shallow portions where there is a gravelly bottom. This bottom is then swept, as it were, by the rapid action of the fins, and a little hollow is excavated in which the eggs are deposited.

The black bass build nests along the margin of the shore which are jealously guarded by the male fish. The carp family deposit their eggs upon twigs or roots on the borders of the ponds. They are left to take their chances without any of the fostering care exhibited by the black bass and other fishes.

RESORT RECORDINGS.

Doings in and About Manitou and Green Mountain Falls.

Nominations for Mayor and Trustees at Green Mountain.

Late Arrivals at the Hotels and Current Personals.

GREEN MOUNTAIN FALLS.

Mrs. Dr. A B McChesney, of Chicago, is a recent arrival.

Miss Minnie Moore of Ypsilanti, Mich., is registered at the hotel.

A very pleasant progressive euchre party was held in the hotel parlors Wednesday evening.

S. N. Nye, of the Colorado Midland, and Mr. S. F. Maltby of Denver, lunched at the hotel yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs Stone of Watertown, Wis., are at the Falls, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jewitt.

Mrs. C. Bousack and daughter, of St. Louis, arrived yesterday and have taken rooms for the season at the hotel.

Mr. Henry Ladd and wife of Austin, Texas and Mr. and Mrs S Speagle of of Chicago, are numbered among the hotel arrivals.

Mrs. L E Taylor, of Denver is among recent arrivals at the Falls. She has purchased lot four, block forty-five, and will erect a handsome cottage.

The business of the Green Mountain Falls company has increased so rapidly as to require the constant services of a stenographer at its office in the hotel.

Prof. A W. Beasley of Peoria, Ill., arrived Wednesday. The professor and his family will be remembered as guests at the Falls during the season of 1889.

A select party of pleasure seekers from Denver occupying a private car, arrived yesterday noon. They devoted the day to sightseeing, and returned home on the evening train.

Miss Florence C. Morse, of Boston has taken rooms for the season at the Conroy cottage, on Belvedere avenue. She has purchased lot two, block forty-five, and will build at once.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Wolf, of Chicago, are registered at the hotel. Mr Wolf owns the largest retail clothing house in Chicago. He is thinking of making the Falls his summer home, and consequently selected an eight hundred dollar lot in block nineteen, as a desirable location for a cottage.

Pursuant to call the first political caucus held in Green Mountain Falls convened at the school house Wednesday evening last at 8 o'clock. The object of the meeting was to nominate a mayor and six trustees to be voted for at the coming election, August 8th. Mr. J G Garland was chosen chairman of the meeting, and E E Brown as secretary. Mr. M. H. Dorenberry and Mr Ja. H. Jewitt were put in nomination for the office of mayor. At the conclusion of the first ballot it was found that Mr. Jewitt received a majority of the votes cast and was declared the nominee for mayor. E E Brown, J G Garland, Geo M Mordoff, Dr C C Engleman, Irvin Trask, and L. Ratcliff were nominated for trustees, after which the caucus adjourned.

Capt W. F. Tibbits, traveling passenger agent of the D & R G. railway arrived in his private car Thursday morning. The captain is not only the oldest traveling passenger agent living, but is the first one ever appointed by an American railway company. He has served continuously for thirty seven years, and has several passes issued to him in 1853 4 which he values highly as relics. The captain will remain with us for a time.

MANITOU.

The Barker gives a hop to night.

Mr. F. O. Von Fritsch, a well known wholesale tobacco merchant of Denver, is among the throng at the Cliff.

The Cliff house gave its usual weekly dance last evening which was well attended and fully enjoyed by all present.

Messrs. John and Louis Roth, prominent business men of Pine Bluffs, Ark., and wives are guests at the Barker to remain several weeks.

A party consisting of Mrs. J W. Davis, of Ft Scott, Kas., Miss Llewellyn Davis, Miss Beatrice Brinkerhoff, of Carthage, Mo., are registered at the Cliff.

Mrs Geo. Nilson, of Kansas City, a guest at the Barker, who has made many friendships during her stay in Manitou, gave a very pleasant card party last night.

Mr. Alexander Orr, the correspondent of the Denver News, who, during his sojourn in Manitou made many warm friendships, has left for his home in Cambridge, Mass.

A large excursion from Pueblo came into Manitou yesterday morning and spent the day. The party numbered nearly three hundred and was run under the auspices of the Southern Methodist church of Pueblo.

A party of ladies from the Atlantic sea board, consisting of Mrs. Chester W. Chapin, Miss Chapin and Miss Pauline Chapin, of New York, and Miss Post, of Boston, arrived yesterday afternoon at the Barker and have taken apartments for quite a sojourn. The party will add in no slight degree to the society at the Barker.

The new trail to the summit of Pike's Peak is receiving a great deal of travel. Every morning quite a party start from each of the hotels, meeting on the Iron Springs road and forming a caravan of merry horse back riders. It is astonishing how many ladies unaccustomed to riding take courage to make the trip. In the evening when they come toiling slowly down the steep ascent the laughter has all died away.

Yesterday was the first day in ten days that it has not rained in Manitou. Visitors who come here under the impression that it never rains find that they are very much deluded. But little complaint or objection is heard in regard to the showers. They come up quickly and pass in the ... ..., leaving the air fresh and exhilarating. No mud is caused as the water passes through the sandy soil leaving the roads in the best possible condition for horseback riding.

Mr. J. C Bond, of London, England, is making a tour of our fair republic and letting several days slip in full enjoyment of the rare delights which Manitou can bestow. His name is on the register at the Barker.

Much comment is heard among guests at the hotels in regard to the excursion to-morrow to Marshall Pass, and the inference to be drawn from these chance remarks is that many will avail themselves of this opportunity. Everything possible is being accomplished by the promoters of the scheme to make the trip profitable and comfortable. A special rate of 50 cents has been made at the Monte Cristo Depot hotel, at Salida, for dinner. A baggage car is also attached to the train to transport all luggage.

By the Market.

NEW YORK, July 31. The stock market was lower this morning, the granger showing a noticeable falling off. The only strong points in the market during the day were sugar and silver certificates. Heavy gold shipments were influential in keeping the market down.

[illegible] the Archbishop [illegible]

Popular in the Pulpit and Brilliant at Dinner Table.

Early Years of His Life and Present Responsibilities.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

The Rev. Patrick John Ryan, archbishop of Philadelphia, has the reputation of being the greatest Catholic pulpit orator in the United States. What is more than this, he deserves the reputation. There is no man in the City of Brotherly Love who is held in higher esteem by the people of all conditions and classes of life than is Archbishop Ryan. He is in his sixtieth year now, but those who know him say that he is in the prime of his usefulness.

ARCHBISHOP RYAN.

It was while he was coadjutor to Archbishop Kenrick, of St. Louis, that his gifts as an orator were most conspicuous. He preached every other Sunday in the vast cathedral, which was always crowded to the doors, many of those who attended being persons belonging to other religious denominations. Since coming to Philadelphia his popularity has increased.

Personally the archbishop is a most delightful man to meet. He is six feet, has a pleasant countenance and fascinating manners. He is liberal in the fullest sense of the word, without in the slightest degree surrendering any of the doctrines of the church of which he is one of the Lords. In this manner he has [illegible] the intimate friendship of such men as George W. Childs, the well known publisher; A. J. Drexel, the world famous banker; George W. Roberts, the head of the great Pennsylvania railroad, and ex-Attorney Gen. Wayne MacVeagh, all of whom are affiliated with other religious denominations. Recently the University of Pennsylvania, a secular institution that has a reputation which extends beyond the borders of this country, bestowed on the archbishop the degree of D. D.

The only objection the people of Philadelphia have to Archbishop Ryan as an orator is that he speaks too rarely. He [illegible] choice expressive English, and talks in a style that is as convincing as it is beautiful. He does not use many gestures, but they are as effective as it is possible to make them.

The archbishop lives quietly, plainly and modestly. His study, in the southwest corner of the archiepiscopal residence, at Eighteenth and Summer streets, is fitted up with what might be termed painful simplicity. It is a large room, with lots of light and ventilation. In the center is a square desk, at which the archbishop does most of his work, with the assistance of the chancellor of the archdiocese, the Rev. Dr. Ignatius F. Horstmann. Pictures of distinguished Catholics and volumes on all conceivable subjects line the walls.

When Daniel O'Connell, the great Irish liberator, was at the height of his popularity he visited a college in the south of Ireland. A little auburn haired boy was chosen to make the address of welcome, and he did it so fervently and enthusiastically that he completely captured the heart of the great Irishman. A few years later O'Connell was billed to lecture in a town near by. The hall was crowded and admission was by ticket only. Shortly before the time for the address a youth presented himself at the door and asked for admission. He had no ticket and he was refused. He persisted, however, and demanded a personal audience with O'Connell. This last desire was granted, and he was ushered into the presence of the liberator. The latter recognized him at once. "Oh," he said, "you are the little red haired boy that greeted me so splendidly in college. Indeed you shall get in, and you shall get one of the very best seats, too." The little red haired boy is now the archbishop of Philadelphia.

The archbishop is an early riser. The first duty of the day is the celebration of mass, which generally takes place in the chapel adjoining the cathedral. After a light breakfast the business of the archdiocese is taken up. The first few hours are set aside for the reception of priests and pastors. Two hours following this are accorded to general visitors. Dinner as a rule is served at 1 o'clock. If the weather is fine in the afternoon the prelate takes a long walk. Although the archbishop is a great orator he has put very few of his thoughts into book form. There is, however, a reproduction of a lecture on "What Catholics Do Not Believe," which was delivered in St. Louis, and has had a large sale both in this country and Europe.

The archbishop is quick at repartee, and those who have come into contact with him pay tribute to his flashes of wit. A good story is told in this connection on ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh. It has been widely retailed at the clubs, but seems to improve with age. Mr. MacVeagh is special counsel of the Pennsylvania [illegible]. One night he attended a [illegible] with President George Roberts [illegible] chatting together, when Mr. [illegible] laughingly remarked that Mr. [illegible] would go anywhere without his [illegible] in a spirit of fun he said: [illegible] Mr. Roberts here can give [illegible] all railroads in this country. [illegible] can't you give him [illegible]

[illegible] admitted that the archbishop [illegible] the [illegible] of the situation.

The province over which Archbishop Ryan presides includes, besides the archdiocese of Philadelphia, the sees of Erie, Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Scranton. Five years ago this province was credited with a Catholic population of 800,000, and at present it is probably nearer 1,000,000 than anything else. GEORGE BARTON.

"THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD."

Something About a New Poem by a Famous Author.

"The Light of the World" is the name of a new poem completed by Sir Edwin Arnold during his residence in Japan. His long famous production, "The Light of Asia," attempted to depict Buddhism from the Christian point of view. The later effort displays Christianity under the light of Buddhism. There exists a great amount of suffering among the poor in Japan at present, and soon after finishing "The Light of the World" Sir Edwin was persuaded to read extracts from his work at an entertainment given in Tokio for the purpose of raising funds for the afflicted. One who listened to the distinguished Englishman's recitation declares that the author "seems to have absorbed the very atmosphere of Palestine, and his poem exhales it. A splendid scene is Pilate flying from the presence of Mary Magdalene at midnight on his swiftest horse, because 'one other watch would make me Nazarene.'" Here are some lines taken down at random from Pilate's delineation of Christ:

> With such a mein one should be wearing purple. His eyes burned themselves on my [illegible] the fire of those mild eyes that had no [illegible] any bitterness. Claudia sighed, "There was no fault." Oh, the light that beamed from those mild eyes! The speech of him was fair [illegible] and his feet a benediction. Authority yet sits upon my lip, but I played traitor to my stoic soul. I might have saved, I would have saved, but that which is writ is writ. I did not dare, and that which hindered was they lusted to win in favor of men instead of praise from heaven. The hands of circumcised baying about my palace that they might drink clean swill! I took water and washed hands before the herd.

Other verses noted by the hearer are full of beauty and power. A few of them are appended:

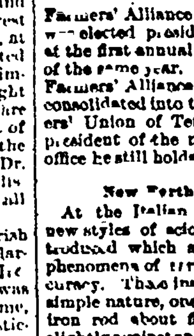

> Write me a song unstained by any tear.
> Deep billows where the winter hides away snows through the summer.
> In the morning watch, when [illegible] through the fate of morn.
> To [illegible] the wild waters. [illegible]
> Christ's [illegible] feet [illegible] threw Jerusalem more utterly than the armies of Titus.

The Grandson of Victor Hugo.

The advocates of the doctrine that the descendants of literary giants must naturally be men and women of more than ordinary ability may point to George Hugo as an example by which to establish their position. Georges is the grandson of the great French poet and novelist, Victor Hugo. When 18 years of age he decided that a man who bore the name of the author of "93" must live in grand style, eat and drink expensively and be a hero among women. To carry out this idea young Hugo mortgaged his prospects, and when he reached his majority was besieged by money lenders, who had advanced $16,000 on notes for $48,000. Hardly had he been extricated from this dilemma when, not long ago, he fought a duel with a chocolate maker and was wounded.

A Farmer Candidate for Governor.

John P. Buchanan, recently nominated for governor by the Democrats of Tennessee, has been a farmer all his life, with the exception of the four years of war time when he served as a Confederate soldier. He was born in 1847, and now lives on a big plantation near Murfreesboro. For a score of years he has taken an active interest in politics, and has represented his district twice in the state assembly. Upon the organization of the Farmers' Alliance in the spring of 1886 he was elected president, and was re-elected at the first annual meeting, held in August of the same year. In July, 1889, when the Farmers' Alliance and Agricultural Wheel consolidated into the Farmers and Laborers' Union of Tennessee, he was chosen president of the new organization, which office he still holds.

New Earthquake Registers.

At the Italian meteorological stations new styles of seismometers have been introduced which are said to register the phenomena of earthquakes with great accuracy. These instruments are of a very simple nature, one consisting merely of an iron rod about five inches long leaning slightly against an adjustable screw support near its middle, and with its lower pointed end in a cup. When a shock or tremor occurs the rod falls away from its support, and is caught by a fixed metallic ring, making electric contact and ringing a bell. In the other instrument the ring is connected with a hinged lever arrangement, which stops the mechanism of a timepiece, showing when the shock occurred.

The Decline of the Berry Box.

The publisher of The Amsterdam (N. Y.) Democrat recently made public a grievance that is by no means singular to himself. Berry boxes, he declares, seem to be growing smaller year by year. When they were first produced they would hold a large quart. Now they have to be pulled and stretched to make them hold a pint and a half. Growers of berry boxes should attend to this matter. It is possible that the soil they grow in needs fertilizing. Perhaps by a hybridizing process the berry box might be crossed with the peach basket and brought back to its original proper size. It is a matter which the growers should think of.

How Senators Go to Dinner.

There was a late session of the senate the other afternoon, and the hungry senators were in a great hurry to get home to dinner. Up Pennsylvania avenue they bowled over the smooth pavements. First came Senator Sawyer, with his stylish daughter, Mrs. White, at his side. The senator had lighted a big cigar, and in his absorption he leaned forward and puffed so vigorously that a cloud of smoke like that from a steamer's pipes drifted behind the swift carriage. Then came the two New York senators in a closed coupe, the big, handsome Frank Hiscock wearing the habitual discontented look on his face, and little Mr. Evarts, peering out through the square windows, like Mr. Punch from his box. Then Senator Stockbridge, in one of Studebaker's finest Victorias, drawn by two of the finest horses in Washington, the senator himself leaning back in his benignant way and waving a salute to his friends as he dashed past. Next Senator Plumb, in his one-horse carryall, and following him Senator McMillan, immaculate in his white waistcoat, black gloves and tie, and with his willowy daughter at his side, giving color to the picture. From a battered hansom Senator Hawley looked forth upon the scene, while Senators Cullom and Reagan contented themselves with the swaying, bumping street car. Cor. Detroit Tribune.

Tact and Philosophy.

Guest—Why don't you put a stop to that fast driving on your streets?

Host—Because the kind of people who indulge in fast driving are just the sort we like to see pass by and get out of sight as quickly as possible.—New York Weekly.

[illegible] BAILEY ALDRICH.

Something About the Author's [illegible]

BOSTON, July 31.—Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich, who has [illegible] succeeded by Mr. Scudder as editor of The Atlantic, had one of the most beautiful homes imaginable at 68 Mount Vernon street, Boston. I had the pleasure of calling upon him there not long since, and was ushered into the large, old fashioned, roomy parlor, up one flight of broad stairs, the poet's favorite study being on the first floor, near the entrance. One could not be more charmed in any place than upon entering this beautiful large double parlor. The very spirit of refinement was everywhere manifest. The mantel in each room first attracted and strongly riveted attention, each bearing a large altar piece of gold, and all at once the visitor found his fancy wandering across the sea to their ancient home and founding solemn pictures of cavaliers, monks, maids, princes and peasants who had often made their weary pilgrimages to the shrine of which these had formed a part.

The windows, too, were all in keeping with the sanctuary, being similar to the elegantly colored windows ordinarily seen in churches. Books were laid about in great profusion almost everywhere, yet not at all with that seeming negligence so often apparent in the homes of book lovers, and more especially makers of books. A volume of Holmes' poems lay upon a table. I took it up, opened it and found upon the fly leaf an autograph inscription to "my esteemed friend, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, with the sincere regards of the author." A splendid large volume bound in the best morocco lay beside it. I took it up, unfixed the hasps which clasped it and found that it was a copy of "The Poems of Thomas Bailey Aldrich," and on the fly leaf found that this beautiful volume which, by the way, was illustrated by members of the Boston Paint and Clay club, was presented by him to his wife, in the following lines:

> Take them and keep them.
> Who can tell? Some day, dear,
> (Though they be withered
> Flower and thorn and blossom)
> Held for an instant
> Up 'gainst thy bosom
> They might make December
> Seem to thee like May, dear.

To my wife Lilian, after seventeen happy years with her.

Nov. 28, 1882.

Upon the next blank sheet was written in the same small but remarkably plain handwriting of Mr. Aldrich the following very pretty verse:

> Two things there are with memory will abide
> Whatever else befall—while life flows by:
> That soft, cold hand touch at the altar side;
> The thrill that shook you at your child's first cry.

Chased by a Mad Horse.

Fields, a little station on the Toledo, Peoria and Western railway, was thrown into great excitement when John Ryno came dashing into town on a buckboard declaring that he had been chased for five miles by a crazy mare. His own horse was covered with foam and showed the effects of a hard drive.

Ryno said his attention was attracted by the running of a horse behind him, and he saw that a white mare was following his buckboard about 100 yards away. The animal kept up a peculiar squealing, as if in sharp pain or deep anger. She came up rapidly, and when within fifty feet Ryno, to his horror, saw that the brute was suffering from rabies, as a stream of green saliva ran from the mare's jaws. The eyes and nostrils were distended, and the hideous squeals became more pronounced.

Ryno lashed his horse. His own animal had begun to tremble, and whinnying with fear broke away at her highest speed; but the mad mare gained and was soon biting and snapping at the buckboard wheels, at Ryno and at his horse. Ryno beat the brute in the face with his whip stock, but to no effect. He says the awful race lasted fully five miles. A passenger train on the Toledo, Peoria and Western came along about then, and the mare, with a hideous squeal, leaped a low hedge and ran after the train. Reno watched the race until the horse and train were lost by a curve. It is now believed that the mare chased the train some distance, but fell in a fit and was subsequently killed by section men. St. Louis Republic.

She Wanted the Genuine.

"Now, this work of art, madam," remarked the dealer, "is a replica of the famous picture in the Corcoran gallery at Washington."

"Well," replied Mrs. Tandree, eying the picture critically, "if you'll guarantee that it's a genuine replica I'll take it." Chicago Inter-Ocean.

NOTICE.

Commencing Friday morning, June 20th, all Colorado Midland trains, both Freight and Passenger, will arrive and depart from Denver and Rio Grande depot, which will be known as the Union Depot in Colorado Springs. No change in time of arrival and departure of trains. f-20 tf

66 hours Colorado Springs to New York via the Rock Island. Ticket office, 12 Pike's Peak Avenue. g-20-tf

The reliable peoples favorite Rock Island Route is still in the lead with the only solid vestibule trains direct from Colorado Springs to Chicago, Kansas City and St. Joseph making direct connections at these points with all diverging railways. g-27-tf

RIO GRANDE RAILROAD.

The Denver Special train leaves at 3:25 p. m., arriving in Denver at 5:55 p. m., making connection with all trains east.

The Wilson Barrett Theatrical Company, who left here on the 10th inst. via the Missouri Pacific Railway, seem to have broken the record for special train service. They have broken all records for fast time, that have been made in America. Probably the best time that will ever be made by any special train between here and the river, was made by the Missouri Pacific Railway, who placed this Company in Kansas City, a distance of 668 miles, in just 12 hours and 15 minutes. This shows what the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, are trying to do for Colorado. When the broad gauge is open over the mountains we understand it is the plan of this Company to place one of the quickest train services on the Continent in operation between New York, St. Louis, Colorado and the Pacific Slope. Since this Company have been in operation into Colorado, they have so pleased the public that their train service is now taxed to its utmost, to accomodate the heavy Eastern travel. g-15-cod-1m

D. & R. G. R. R. will sell on August 1st to 4th tickets to Chicago and return at one fare for the round trip. Final limit of tickets, August 13th; account Patriarchs Militant. g-30-7

The Missouri Pacific Railway Company, are now running the finest through Buffet Pullman service between here, Kansas City, St. Louis, and New York, of any railway line out of Colorado Springs, the sleepers have a free circulating library as well as all the latest improvements. These coaches were constructed at a cost of $18,980 each, and in consequence the summer tourist going east being assured of every comfort, should by all means, try this route the famous Colorado Short Line it is by far the most picturesque of any line crossing the plains, running through the richest agricultural portion of the Western States, Missouri, Kansas and Colorado, for a cool as well as pleasant ride between the mountains and the plains, if once you take this route you will always come again. g-15-cod-1m

SANTA FE ROUTE FOR TEXAS.

A NEW SLEEPER.

The Great Rock Island Route has put on a new sleeper between Colorado Springs and Kansas City on the limited train leaving Colorado Springs 7.45 p. m.

This is especially for convenience of the Company's patrons desiring to go from this place to Kansas City and points beyond and lays at Colorado Springs from 7.20 a. m., until departure of limited train at 7.45 p. m. b-1-tf

NEW AND ELEGANT TRAIN SERVICE.

The train service on the New York Central is being constantly improved. Never before in the history of the Company were there so many fine trains being run on this line, and the business is steadily increasing. Last year, the Company carried over 18,000,000 passengers, and it is expected this year the number will be considerably larger.

THE WABASH RAILROAD.

THROUGH PULLMANS from Colorado, Utah and Wyoming to St. Louis; this requires but one change of cars between points in the State and Territories above named to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, and other eastern points.

THROUGH DINING CARS from Denver to St. Louis, connecting at that point with through diners from there to the principal eastern cities, abundance of time and the finest menu the market affords.

THROUGH FREE CHAIR CARS via the Wabash to all principal points on its line via: Chicago, Toledo, St. Louis, Lafayette, Jacksonville, Peoria, Des Moines, Danville, Springfield, Detroit, Ottumwa and intermediate points.

MANN BOUDOIR CARS are run between Kansas City and St. Louis, Chicago and Toledo. These are the most elegant passenger coaches ever built, and insure the utmost privacy and luxury. An elegantly equipped buffet is a prominent feature of this service.

MOUNTAIN MARVELS.

From the car windows of the trains of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad can be seen the grandest spectacles of nature's wonders presented by any railroad on the globe, on account of which this road has gained the much merited title of the "Scenic Line of the World."

The Rio Grande is essentially the tourists' line, and over it the traveler secures equal comfort and speed, with the added pleasure of beholding sights and scenes unequalled for grandeur, beauty and sublimity anywhere in this country or Europe. No American should miss the opportunity to see the grandeur of his own country as seen only by a journey over this line, and by so doing hang such pictures on the walls of memory, that all the attempts of the most celebrated artists will seem weak and trivial in the presence of nature's majestic works among the snow crowned peaks of the Rocky mountains. If any of our readers desire to know more about these stupendous works of nature the Denver and Rio Grande railroad has on sale at Manitou and Colorado Springs, excursion tickets to all the resorts and scenic points in Colorado and Utah, including the famous trip "Around the Circle," Buena Vista, Leadville, Glenwood, Aspen, Del Norte, Salt Lake City, etc., etc.

Proposed Signal Station Removal.

The following correspondence is self explanatory.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

The following letters are submitted to the public through the columns of the GAZETTE, as the shortest way of bringing them to the attention of such citizens as may be interested. It may be well to notice here one oversight in the letter of General Greely. The monthly bulletin has been printed, and a limited number of copies issued up to November, 1889, not July, 1889. That which stopped at the date named by the general was the publication of the sixteen page paper "Colorado Weather," which included the monthly bulletin, and which it was hoped to support by advertisements. I regret to have to add, that some of the bills for those advertisements are still unsettled. In particular the board of trade, whose support was at first one of the main dependencies of that particular form of the enterprise, neglected to pay our bills after the first quarter. This is mentioned, not to complain of a lack of interest on the part of the citizens of Colorado Springs, but rather to indicate clearly the way in which an opening has been afforded through our present embarrassment for the Denver claim to be successfully pushed. It is further to be noticed that the general assumes, as evident for special statement, that the transferance of the state office includes the abandonment of the Colorado Springs local signal office. If any of the citizens have reasons to give why either of these institutions should be retained here, they should be presented to the chief signal officer without undue delay.

F. H. LOUD.

SIGNAL OFFICE, WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., July 24, 1890.

Mr F. H. Loud, State Weather Service Director, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

I have been strongly urged, by persons interested in the state weather service of Colorado, to remove the central station to Denver, where the office will be more centrally located on lines of communication which would enable the state service not only to collect but to distribute the information received from state observers.

Reasons given for this change are four, and I feel obliged to comply with the request, especially as under existing conditions at Colorado Springs there seems to be little opportunity for making the service of general benefit to the state, and there are apparently no means at hand for the publication of data, the last published bulletin having been issued just one year ago this month.

I am assured and convinced that, with the removal of the station to Denver, facilities would be offered for the publication of the meteorological tables from month to month, and very likely some progress might be made in the collection and publication of data in the interest of state agriculture.

The inspecting officer who recently visited Colorado Springs strongly recommends the change, and unless some provision be made for the regular publication of the current data, I shall have to close the station at Colorado Springs on September 1st and order the assistant to Denver with instructions for him to co-operate with the State Board of Agriculture of Colorado and reorganize the state service if such reorganization is desired; otherwise I will close the station and withdraw the observer, as I am greatly in need of competent observers to take charge of regular meteorological stations.

In taking this action I am prompted by the desire to make the general Weather Service valuable to the public as possible, and in this connection I desire to acknowledge the valuable service which you have rendered in the cooperative work already performed in Colorado, but as it appears from your annual report that the state service is cramped for means, with no immediate prospect for relief, it will doubtless be for the best interests of all concerned to place the central station where its location will be likely to secure assistance from commercial and agricultural organizations, and volunteers who may be desirous of contributing means for the publication of the bulletin.

The officers of the college at Fort Collins are desirous of securing the central station at that point, and offer the necessary means for regular publications. Parties at Denver are also anxious to secure this service, and offer the support of the commercial and business organizations of that city; and while it would seem ill advised to place the station so far from the centre of population as Fort Collins, I am inclined to believe that greater benefit would result from the central station being placed at Denver.

I am, very respectfully,
A. W. GREELY,
Chief Signal Officer.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., July 29, 1890.

To the Chief Signal Officer of the Army.

GENERAL: I am in receipt of your letter of the 24th inst. in regard to the proposed transfer of the State Weather Service office from Colorado Springs. I was well aware that some proposition of the kind was under consideration, and have not put the slightest hindrance in the way of the plan, as I appreciate, in part at least, the arguments cited in favor of Denver, and having, as I hope, earned the credit of having actually promoted the study of meteorology in this state, I am especially desirous of never being suspected of hindering its progress on any personal grounds.

Now that the matter has been officially proposed, I shall lose no time in bringing it to the attention of those persons here who are most interested in the matter, and who of course have a right to be heard as well as their rivals. It is not improbable that a result of this step will be to dispose of the difficulty resulting from lack of funds for current publication. Whether other objections to the present location will outweigh its advantages, it will be for others than myself to decide.

Allow me to suggest that in case of a removal to Denver, the Colorado Meteorological association, whose founders and some of its principal promoters reside there, would be the better organization, (rather than the state board of agriculture) to accomplish the transfer, because first, the association originated and has for five years controlled the state service; second, because for this reason the removal would be accomplished with the utmost facility, no reorganization in a proper sense being necessary, but only the presenting on the part of one or two officers of reports and resignations (which will be at any time ready) and the election of successors; third, because an examination of the act of 1889 (Colorado legislature) relating to the state weather service, will indicate that it is very doubtful whether the board of agriculture could take the initiative in a change of directors, as that board is by law required to adopt in that capacity the officer appointed by the association. Nor can there be the slightest question that the Meteorological association, under the direction of such Denver citizens as Drs Fisk and Denison, and Mr Wilson, will admit and utilize without friction, all aid which may be obtainable from other organizations, whether of the city or state.

I beg your indulgence in one point farther, relating to an order recently addressed to Sergt W S. Miller from your office, requiring the transmittal forthwith to Washington of original records of observations made since January 1, 1890, by observers using your instruments, and looking to a probable requisition of previous records of the same kind. My individual opinion is that to insist upon immediate compliance with this order, would be of much detriment to the state service. I know that others share this belief. I would earnestly request that this order be temporarily rescinded, until the two questions of a change in the location of the state office, and in the incumbent of the office of director, shall have been settled.

Will you be so kind as to inform me of the exact steps necessary to be taken in order to secure my release from the responsibility incurred by giving my personal bond for instruments to your office.

I am, very respectfully yours,
F. H. LOUD,
Director Colorado Weather Service.

A PRESENTATION.

Rev. Jas. B. Gregg Presented with a Gold Watch and Chain by His Congregation.

A large number of the members of the First Congregational church assembled at the residence of Mr F. L. Martin last evening, the occasion being a church social and the presentation of a watch and chain and a purse to Rev. J. B. Gregg, the pastor.

At about half past eight Mr. Gregg was told that some one in the hall wished to see him and he came out of the parlor and confronted President Slocum, the members of the congregation filling up the doorways and blocking any escape. President Slocum commenced by humorously alluding to the fact that Mr Gregg had suffered the loss of a fine watch some time ago and since then he had carried an ancient silver one that was presumably inefficient as a timekeeper. The west, he said, had recently been very much agitated over the silver question and the members of the congregation had been deeply grieved to hear that Mr. Gregg was withholding silver from circulation. They wanted him placed upon a good gold basis and therefore they had insisted upon gold for this watch case. Further, he said, things in town had been running sadly behind, the Salt Lake train was always late and the entertainments at the opera house and elsewhere were never on time. The congregation regarded Mr. Gregg as their regulator, and were inclined to hold him responsible for this tardiness. On this account they had decided to present him with an absolutely correct timepiece that he might never have any good excuse to offer for any deficiencies in this particular. He went on to tell how in the olden times the deacons all carried revolvers and after the pastor had preached 21 minutes, he heard the click of the deacons cocking their guns. He did not then need any timepiece to let him know that his time was up but quit. Under the influences of civilization the revolvers had been abandoned and the congregation had lost some of their hold on the length of their pastor's sermons. This watch was to be a reminder to Mr Gregg when the time went by, that there must be an end to all temporal things. All these things which he had mentioned, he said, had something to do with the gift of the watch but the principal object was as a testimonial of their esteem and love for Mr. Gregg. He hoped that in Mr. Gregg's absence in the east he would, when he referred to his timepiece, think of those who had presented it and their love and esteem for him. He then handed Mr Gregg the watch and purse amid general applause.

Mr. Gregg was considerably affected during President Slocum's speech and the presentation was a complete surprise to him. He said that it was difficult for any man to make a speech on an occasion like this. Words would not come to him as he wished but he remembered a little of the Latin he learned in school and that was "tempus fugit." He thought he would put the "tempus" in his pocket and "fugit." He would try and make the watch serve the purpose for which it was given and would ever cherish it as a token of the love and esteem of his congregation which he fully appreciated and reciprocated.

After long continued applause Mr. Gregg was made the recipient of the congratulations, well wishes and farewell greetings of his congregation and the company returned to the parlors where excellent musical and literary programme was rendered. Refreshments were served later on and the evening was spent in a pleasant social manner by the members of the church.

The watch is a very expensive one, of massive gold and containing the finest obtainable movement. On the inside of the case is engraved "To Rev. James B. Gregg from the First Congregational church, Colorado Springs, July 31, 1890." Mr. Gregg starts in a day or two for a vacation tour in the east and carries with him in addition to these valuable testimonials, the love and will wishes of a large circle of friends, including many outside of his congregation.

Tomorrow's Excursion.

The excursion to be run to Marshall Pass and the Royal Gorge to morrow is very promising. The promoters of the scheme have left no stone unturned that may add to the pleasure and comfort of the patrons. This is the only opportunity of the season to see so many miles of Colorado's grandest scenery in one day. The fare for the round trip from Colorado Springs is but $3.00, about one third the regular price. The train leaves the D. & R. G. depot at 7 20.

A Card

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 31, 1890

The reception committee for the celebration of the progress of the colored people of the state of Colorado, has made all necessary arrangements for the celebration on August 5th, and a grand day of speaking by prominent colored orators, and sports at the Athletic grounds. All are invited to participate in the affair.

E. H. BUCKNER,
Chairman.

Dr. Haupt to-day and to morrow will deliver free lectures to demonstrate how he teaches German in a five weeks' course of lessons. These lectures will be given in room No. 28 of the Bank block at 10 30 a. m. and 4 p. m. Of Dr. Haupt's work Bishop Dudley, of the diocese of Kentucky, says: "I have attended Professor Haupt's five weeks' course of instruction in German, and am amazed at the results accomplished in so short a time. Prof Haupt is a remarkable teacher, hence come the results which are so astonishing. I shall ever be grateful to him for the pleasure, no less than for the profit, which I have received from his lessons."

Manager Sellers, of the Alamo, last night replaced the white waiters and most of the kitchen employes in his hotel with colored men. He feels that he has secured a fine crew of waiters and that the service at his house will be better than ever. A new head waiter and crew of white waiters went to work at the hotel three days ago, most of them coming from Denver. They claim that a month's salary is due them, which claim Mr Sellers resists. They employed Attorney Artz last night to bring a suit to recover.

E. F. Welles & Co., have just received a car load of carts, being the second car received in six weeks. The Parry Manufacturing company of Indianapolis has just made this firm its state agents for the sale of carts, voluntarily taking the agency from Denver. This is quite an honor as the firm is the largest in the country. Welles & Co are securing a fine business throughout the state for their carriages, carts and harness. They have just received a car load of the Babcock carriages.

The Spanish-American Students at the opera house to night.

The Postal Telegraph company have new offices open at La Junta and Denver beside this city.

C. H. Roberts, who has a claim near Falcon, made final proof yesterday with the district clerk

Mrs. Mary Calhoun Dixon, the elocutionist, is stopping in the city, accompanied by her son.

Mr. Douglas Gray, of Phoenix, Ariz., was granted a license to marry Ida Jane Nickerson, of River Forest, Ills., yesterday.

The good work goes on Shimp will continue his 20 per cent discount sale for a few days Make hay while the sun shines.

The Woman's Exchange closes to-day. This action was taken at a meeting of the board of managers held on Tuesday, July 29.

Mr. J. B Townsend, son of Hon Horace Townsend, is in the city on his way to his home, in Silver Cliff, from Yale where he will be a senior next year.

A large excursion is to be run to this city from Denver over the Santa Fe on Sunday and thence to Cheyenne canon. It is thought about 900 people will be here.

Major Wagner, of New York, secretary and assistant treasurer of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, and the first mayor of Colorado Springs, is expected in the city soon with his family.

Mr. Geo. M. Fisher, for the last fifteen years connected with the treasury department at Washington, has located at No. 12 North Tejon street in the real estate and life insurance business.

The Spanish American Students will give an instrumental concert at the opera house this evening, consisting of selections by their orchestra and banjo, guitar, mandolin and violin solos

The watch and chain presented to Rev. J. B. Gregg last night were purchased from the new jewelry firm of Randall, Lott & Randall, whose handsome store adorns the Hagerman block

City Clerk Corman assisted by Mr. R. W. Anderson and Alderman McCreery yesterday began the work of checking up the warrants of last year's council to make a report on the water committee's expenditures.

There will be a meeting of the board of trade this evening and as it is the first meeting for some time, the members are urged to be present. President DeCourcy's resignation has not yet been acted upon, besides other important business.

An important meeting of the board of trade at Manitou is called for this evening to consider the electric road right of way question. The Journal says that the matter of a boulevard to this city will also be discussed and urges a large attendance.

The local committee among the colored people are doing everything to make the arrangements for the celebration a success, on August 5th. It is thought 3000 colored people will be in the city on that day, some 1500 tickets having already been sold in Denver.

Frank Loper, who has been for a long time assistant head waiter at the Antlers, has taken the position of head waiter at the Alamo. The Alamo gets a good man for the position in Frank Loper, and the service at the hotel will be sure to be up to the high water mark under his direction.

C. W. Palmer, the young man who became involved in the quarrel between Frank and Eugene Roberts over a piece of land near Broadmoor, and who was charged with disorderly conduct and with flourishing a revolver in a reckless manner, was discharged by Justice Walker yesterday.

Mr. F F Horn, lapidist of this city, received one of the most interesting finds of specimens in Colorado last week, consisting of over 400 pounds of pure smoky quartz crystals all of good color and perfect shape. One cluster weighs over 70 pounds and contains several exceptionally large and fine crystals. The find was made in the mountains only a few miles from the city.

Messrs. Sooy & Foley the photographers, have just finished the large photograph of Wilson Barrett, the distinguished English tragedian, which they were enabled to secure during his recent visit. Mr Barrett only sat three times during his tour of the country, and the firm feels quite flattered that he should have the best of their work to give them a trial. The picture shows the head and bust taken in the costume of Hamlet and is a fine piece of work. It is on exhibition in their gallery.

Following is the programme for the concert by the Centennial State band in Alamo park to night:

1. Clayton's Grand March ..... Blake
2. Selection from Martha ..... Flotow
3. Schottische Invitation ..... Welker
4. Waltz—Remembrance of Naples ..... Bennett
5. Polka Mazurka—Angeletta ..... Faust
6. Medley—A day in Boston ..... Claus

M. O. BARNES, Director.

Mr. Daniel Frohman's production of Mark Twain's "Prince and Pauper," Elsie Leslie and the New York cast, will be the occasion of great interest next Monday evening at the opera house. The Prince and the Pauper may be termed a prose idyl. As a domestic story there is none prettier in the English language Its characters stand out vividly like figures in a painting, and its scenes are described with a realism rarely equaled. Tenderness, pathos and exquisite humor permeate it. The story is beautifully told by its gifted author and has been enhanced by dramatization. All who have been interested in reading Mark Twain's charming novel, "The Prince and the Pauper," are sure to be delighted when they witness the splendid stage representation of Mr. Frohman's company gives of this witty and interesting story.

Central Office for Austin Bluff Property.

The finest Suburban Residence Location combining view of mountain and plain in the state. Beautiful parks, overgrown with large pine trees unequalled as a health location. Pure air, pure water, and plenty of it, both for domestic and irrigating purposes. No smoke! No dust! The track of the Electric Car Line is already laid from one of the parks in the center of this property to the city limits. Cars will be running within a few weeks, bringing this property within fifteen minutes' ride from the postoffice. Several fine residences will be erected on this property at an early date. Special Inducements offered for the next 60 days to parties buying lots with the intention of building at once. Why locate in the smoke and dust of our city when such an opportunity is offered? Each lot contains from one to four acres. Specially adapted for fine residences. This location speaks for itself. All that we ask is an inspection of the property before purchasing.

Agent for East Colorado Springs, Grand View and Knob Hill Additions.
